MODULUS

NINTH ANNUAL
OF THE
SENIOR CLASS

1920

E. FLEENER

Foreword

There comes a time in the life of every man, when, weary of life's responsibility, he casts off the chill, enveloping cloak of age and wanders in mind back through the Elysian fields of youth.

His school days were the golden days when the fragrant rosebud of the mind grew, and unfolded its petals to the light of necessity and reality.

But memory is oftimes faithless, and in the incessant hurry of events, forgets the joys and pleasures af the past.

And that is why we give to you this Modulus: "Lest we forget."

Editor-in-chief.

NOBLE MANHOOD

There high upon some cliff of life,
With sinews hardened for the strife,
And with trained senses all aglow,
Touched with Divine to overflow,
Is he who 'mid the din of earth,
The scream of wealth's ill-counted worth
The shouts of fame, of passions strong;
Above the clamors of the throng,
Hears with a sound distinct and clear,
The still small voice of conscience near;
He who can see o'er fog and smoke,
Above the willow and the oak,
The Trees of Life with branches high,
He sees the farthest in the sky;
He lives the most upon earth's sod,
And climbs the nearest to his God.

THE CLASS OF 1920

The Class of 1920 has indeed been one of achievement and success and little needs to be said, as in accordance with their motto, they shall be known by "Deeds, Not Words."

The election of class officers was held at the beginning of the first semester. Wilbur Cook was chosen president; Elvin Fleener, vice-president; and Virginia Spencer, secretary-treasurer. The social committee was appointed early and all thru the year did much to keep a feeling of good will among the Seniors, as the social affairs were always a success.

The colors of the class were chosen as purple and gold and the violet was chosen as the flower.

The Senior Play proved to be a success in every way and due credit must be given to the excellent work of the cast, who did their best, and in an excellent manner.

At the beginning of the first semester plans were made to start a class paper known as "The High School World." This was a weekly paper of four pages and due to efficient management at all times and the untiring and ceaseless efforts of all connected with the paper, it was a success, in every way that could be desired.

The Modulus of 1920 was dedicated to Mrs. Templeton, who has always been a faithful friend of every Senior and a favorite of everyone at all times.

The Class extends its most sincere thanks to Mrs. Poinier who was chosen as class advisor, as she has been a friend of the Seniors and a willing helper in anything that has been for the betterment of the class. Also Mr. Byers has shown a friendliness to the best interests of the class and one which will never be forgotten by any senior.

As the end of the term approached, the Junior-Senior Reception marked the closing of the social events for the year and was one which was a last farewell and will always remain foremost among the memories of the Class of 1920.

WILBUR E. COOK, '20.

MY MONUMENT

If I can plant within my breast
A lily pure as snow,
And foster it while care caressed
And fear no worldly foe;

If I can send thru moral air
Its precious influence shed,
And keep it thriving nobly there
While wintry storm clouds spread;

If I can bear through summer heat
Without one scar or blight,
And leave it consumate, complete
With pure and spotless white.

I feel that I have reared a shaft
Within the hearts of men,
That will outlast all worldly craft
And shine for angels' ken.

"When I was in Akron", is a pet memory of our dignified president. He is a real man of the world; who's pleasing manners, good looks, ready wit and unusual amount of good common sense have won him a place in all our hearts. Wherever Wilbur goes he's sure to have a host of friends.

"Hobby" should be Virginia's middle name. You never see Ginnie that she doesn't have something up her sleeve that is engrossing a large part of her time. She dances, plays tennis, golf, cards, runs a car, plays a piano and victrola; all with equal skill. And think! With all that she finds time for Ernie, and her latest hobby the "ouija board."

From the time Elvin entered the old high school as a sophomore to the last two years in the new high school, he has many friends. Not only is he a good mixer but his athletic ability has made our high school justly proud of him. As business manager of this "Modulus" Elvin has been a great success.

Chorus '17.

John is one of our prodigal sons. Altho he quit in '17 to take the trip west, we hear so much about him since he has returned to graduate with the good old class of '20. John's chief topic of conversation is his trip west. He says that he kept a very exciting (?) diary during all the time he was gone, and that no one but his wife will ever get to see it. Some young dame might get the chance. This is leap year you know.

Did you ever in all your life see such a mass of golden hair? Never! But there is a mystery about it. Where do her "Mary Pickford" curls go when she does her hair up? Sh—sh—dark secret. Naturally Agnes makes everyone take a "second look" one always does at a decided Teutonic blond. But that disarming "Blue eyed, blond haired" combination which nature bestowed graciously upon her does not prevent her working serenely as if she never had a thing to "turn her head". Her earnest efforts to get her work have made her a senior whom we are justly proud of.

Behold those wrinkles of care which rest upon his youthful brow. They reveal a characteristic of Parney. He's always worrying about something. He has more troubles than a married man. But don't think that he's solemn and serious always. His ability to make friends and his irrepressible Irish humor make him one of our most popular fellows.

From the time of her freshman year Mabel has entered into the school activities. She is one of the most versatile members of this magnificent class. From "handing a line" in 4-1 English to getting fellows she proves herself equally adept. Even now she has about a "dozen" "at her feet". So hour by hour she sits gazing appraisingly first at one masculine portrait and then at another, not being able to decide whom to take.

To look at Herbert he certainly would not give you the impression of being a tease. But oh boy! There you get a surprise. "Buzzie's" inexhaustible sense of humor and good comradeship make him one of our best liked seniors. As a scientific farmer he will be a decided success.

Mercella is one of the friendliest, most adorable girls in this class. She has not been with us all these four years and we have missed something by not having her with us longer; but all the same we were delighted to have her with us in our last and best year.

During the four years of High School everyone has known of Homer's athletic pursuits, as he has been in class basket ball from his freshman year. Not content with being a real man among the men, he has found a warm place in the hearts of all the girls, especially those who dance. His dancing is second to none. As a versatile, all-around man he wins a host of friends wherever he goes.

"Who painted that wonderful picture?" someone was heard to ask as they gazed upon a most beautiful oil painting. "Thelma." Thelma is not one of these fantastic artists with stringy hair and a sloppy artist's smock. She is a beauty! Never would you realize the mind she possesses if you believe that a "baby doll" can't think. As an artist Thelma will become famous.

"Who is that "flame-tressed" beauty? " I heard a stranger exclaim. "Gee! she's some doll." Ruth surely is blessed with the good things of life if ever anyone was. That "peaches and cream" complexion and "bronzy" glory of her hair make everyone pay homage to her beauty. But unlike the old rule of "beauty and no brains" Ruth has a super-abundance. She plays the piano like Chris Axel cooks like a Frenchie, has an inexhaustible sense of humor, a great amount of common sense and as a medical assistant she is not behind any. It is needless to say that many have discovered her merits. She is deluged with attentions.

One of the most courteous, most business-like members of this class is Johnny. His famous auditorium speeches are remembered by everyone. But don't think that he is only an orator. His work in basketball and physical training have also won no little notice from the school. When he leaves us he will probably be a physical director.

Lucile is one of the hard workers in this school. She is the ideal senior whom Mr. Byers aspires for us to become; so that we may set the path for the stumbling, wandering under-classmen to follow. As a maker of "E's" on her report card Eli's right on the job; but she can have a good time as well as she can work. Prepare for a stupendous jolt. Eli is going to Africa and become the proprietress of an ostrich farm. Lay in your bids right now for plumes and you may get them at cost for the sake of "Auld Lang Sang."

No doubt in the years to come when we are gazing dreamily over this annual at the class of '20, we will pause over the picture of "Katie" and say, "Oh, yes, Catherine Zahm. Just think! I went to school with her and now she is one of the most well known lyric sopranos." Katie's greatest ambition is to study for grand opera.

We do not know Meredith very well; for all that he has been with us four years. He is one of the best and quietest boys in the class but one of our highest flying senior girls says that Meredith is not so silent and solemn when you know him. So we do know that he has his fun even if he doesn't publish it broadcast by an ear to ear grin and a stentorian voice.

Agnes is one of the quietest girls in this entire class. Without any noise or disturbance she quietly goes among us. Her citizenship is that of the ideal student. As for her work she always puts forth her best efforts in it. When she leaves us we wish her all the luck in the world for future success.

During his four years in Huntington High Paul has remained more or less in obscurity. He is very reserved and reticent. More than one girl has wondered why in the duce Paul didn't "fall" for somebody. But his serenity is unruffled. Down to business is his motto, and if he continues to make it so success will be his.

Look at Clara. What do you think of her? Determined you say? Yes indeed! She makes everything boom that she undertakes. Clara had the big job of Literary editor of the "World". She was one of the few who did the work well. One of the most noticeable characteristics of Clara is her great friendship with Kathlyne Kitt. They are inseparable.

The "twenties" boast of being a novelty class. In our "experienced" and "sophisticated" class we have one married man. Roswell's the fellow. But even such a catasthrophe as marriage would not keep him from graduating with us. So here he is with a wife, a diploma and the class of '20's sincere congratulations.

Geraldine is another recent addition to our class, but that is not saying she is the least. She is one of the most agreeable, sweet tempered of senior lassies and we only regret that she could not have been with us sooner.

Here is a member of the famous basket ball five. Everyone in H. H. S. will vouch for the great part Hubert played in winning the basket ball triumphs we won during the last two basket ball seasons. Everyone likes Hubert because of his kindly disposition and genial smile. We prophesy great things for him in college athletics, and as for popularity he will have many friends away at school as he had here.

Devotedness to religion and a decidedness to make everyone see her views has attracted the attention of more than one person to Grace. Her brilliant remarks in 4-1 English debates have caused not a little admiration and a trace of envy to those less fluent with the King's English.

Lawrence is one of the most capable, energetic members of this class. The success of our "High School World" was largely due to his business like ability. Getting on the good side of the teachers has always been a knack of his. His modest mien and quietness often make us wonder how he can make such a wonderful man; but don't worry, he has the "gift of gab", but uses it only when necessary.

Cornelia came all the way from the Lone Star state to graduate with us. We have discovered her to be a very pleasant acquisition indeed. Girls and boys alike have found out her refreshing wit and piquant charms. And we are only too sorry to lose her so soon.

Every body knows Emptie Creager. His ready wit, musical voice and clever ability to mimic, makes him a foremost figure in various school entertainments.

As Jake Doogan in "Stop Thief" he was a decided success. The mistake of kissing Ruth Morgan an extra time other than was scheduled shows his dramatic ability to cut into the usual cut and dried preciseness of the drama. This summer Merrit will resume his work at Akron.

LaVina goes quietly and efficiently about her work and altho she does not talk all the time she showed us that she could if she wanted to. We will not soon forget her speech about "Lincoln's Policy" given in one of our Friday morning programs; for it was as splendid as it was a surprise. LaVina will no doubt take up a business career after leaving us, and we wish her all the good luck in the world.

The map of Ireland is on his face—shure and it is. "Mootz" is very intellectual, but very modest about it. He tries to conceal the fact by his ready wit; but the "deep stuff" will reveal itself. It has been generally supposed that "Mootz" would follow the trail of his brother and be a clothier. However he has proven to the public his histronic ability. As "Jimmy Cluney" in the Senior play "Stop Thief" he was a great success.

Talk about efficient people! Keturah is that. She is a vertible star in the commercial department and a regular Latin shark. But don't think that that decreases her capacity for enjoying a good time. We should advise her to tune her squeal down from key of high C to B natural.

"Who is that cute little fellow with such rosy cheeks and good looking eyes?" a certain girl was heard to remark. Albert is right there with the good looks, and the "line" and is a very business like little chap. He believes in starting early. We believe this at least from reports we have heard concerning him.

Mildred is undeniably one of the biggest fussers in this worthy class. Her "million dollar style" "perfect marcels" and dancing are the envy of woman kind. You never can tell what she's going to do after she leaves us. We advise a "model's" career for her.

Carl's chief attributes are his good looking eyes and Cadillac. Hard to see the connection at first but allow us to explain. Both are good attributes when it comes to getting a girl. Carl's planning to go to Cornell to study.

Susie looks like a dainty apple blossom. Her cheeks are a soft pink and her hair is curly, all around her face. No make up about Susie. She is a plain, natural girl—one of the sweetest in our class. Susie's brilliant answers in 4-2 English arouse not a little comment.

Quietness is Neal's middle name. He is a doer of deeds, not a talker. Neal first won our notice when he helped win the agricultural cup for the school; then he won another round in the ladder, of fame as a "cop" in our Senior play. Wouldn't it be great if he'd turn out to be a second "Bill Hart" or "Broncho Billy?"

Lucille is the fourth and last of the well known Brock tribe to go thru Huntington High School. She is just like her predecessors—the "still water" type. You know the rest of that saying about still water running deep—that's Brocky. She seems so demure and solemn, but oh! boy. When you know her——! She's in for all the good times she can get. Her hobbies are "big brothers" and coco-colas. As a hair dresser Lucille is destined to make a great success.

Here is the last of the "Entre Nous" to leave High. Margaret has always had such a good time that she made up her mind not to rush thru, but graduate with her own class. Of course we were very glad to keep her for she is one of our most "peppy" girls

"Cupid's Information Bureau" should be Paul's position. If you want any information about any case in high school let us refer to Paul. He knows them all. Being a happy man blessed with a steady girl he takes an interest in people who are likewise in that blissful state. But to lay all jokes aside he is one of the friendliest, fellows in the school. His kind interest in those around him makes him one of the most agreeable companions one could desire; and he will surely be missed when he leaves H. H. S.

Never in all your life will you find a girl like Vera. Her Latin is so faultless that she need not be abashed if Caesar or Cicero themselves would insist upon a tete-a-tete with her. She is also very capable at detecting "forged" excuses. So she is a great linguist and Sherlock Holmes combined.

Oh boy! "Isn't he good looking?" is what all the girls say. How they envy him his dimples and rosy complexion. Here of late Charlie has been a positive married man. Sedately he sees his "lady love" and the chaperon (a member of the faculty) safely home. Why really, he hasn't been "canned" once this whole term. But that's quite natural; he is overcome by senorial dignity.

Altho our high school has boasted of a number of beauties there are few who are more beautiful than Jeanette. She is "peppy" too. Don't think that she just sits by like a statue for people to admire and fellows to rave about. Jeanette's animation is one of her greatest charms. When she leaves us she is planning to become a kindergarten teacher and we are sure she will prove a good one.

As a clever lawyer, Don is sure to attain the heights of success. From his early freshman year to his brilliant senior year he has been the terror and darling of the classes in history and English. You see Don's love for an "argument" allays the fear of the other members who are not possessed of a "gift of gab" or a lesson in return for their hard (soft pedal) labors.

Of all the wide awake people in this class Irene is second to none. She hears and sees everything. Because of her unusual facilities in this line she is very interesting to talk with. Interesting bits of harmless gossip about everyone are always refreshing from the "cut and dried" subjects of "weather", "school", "clothes", and "back-biting".

"Guess her nationality. She's proud of it." It was told that Fort Wayne's '20's would claim her but she returned this year to graduate with us after all. The most noticeable characteristics of Marie are her black curls. It is a dark mystery as to how she gets them to stay so tight.

Ah!—Here is our "blue-eyed, heart breaking baby doll." Walter's art of keeping girls on the guess has made him more than one feminine admirer. That's what he told a certain pretty freshman girl. (If we are to believe her.) But no joking, Grupe is a lady's man and an all-round boy too. As a man of business Grupe is sure to succeed. His nose shows that. (The staff found that out in a fortune telling book.) During Walter's high school career he has made a number of friends and we are sure he will make as many during his next four years at I. U. His ability to make friends and his irrepressible Irish humor make him one of our most popular fellows.

We all admire versatile girls. Mary can play ragtime until your feet won't stand still; get a string of "E's" a yard long; get up a most successful party, and possesses a "million dollar" line so valuable that the Frash store absolutely couldn't get along without her. With her business ability she is sure to make good.

Suddenly Don sprang into the chief events of the school. We wonder how he ever became so well known and yet so quiet; but then his real business ability could not pass by unnoticed, of course. Don's work as Business manager of the "World" and advertising for the "Modulus" have surely done the school as well as himself credit. Altho his two years with us have been short we have been delighted to welcome him as a "twenty".

Helen is purely the "Quaker maid" type. You never heard of her getting canned, for she is too sedate to do anything to get canned for. Helen's hobbies are her poetry and scrap book. People looking into that book would get an eye full. She is an charter member of the "D. D. D's" whose good times read like a story book.

Howard has become a very prominent figure in school because of his active part in high school athletics. He played on the second team of '19 and part of '20; but being such a brilliant person he left us in January to wrestle with the H. C. of L. in Carl Neuer's lunch room rather known as "Tommy's Lunch". He has proven himself a "real man of business" and even now he is paving the way to something better.

"Sopho" indeed, our talented poetess. Helen has proved herself an exceptional hustler, in the last few weeks, rounding up credits. But she has certainly worked like wild fire on this little old book. We have great hopes for her in the future, for Helen is also our most talented musician, as well as our most adept story teller.

It is very seldom we have the pleasure of beholding a classical beauty like we read about in Greek mythology, but let us introduce you to our modern "Don Rosetta girl". Myrtle is the essence of dignity and propriety. Grave and solemn in her beauty she is a demi-goddess if such could be. She is planning to go to I. U. and may her golden dreams come true.

When you see the picture of this pretty blonde lassie you would never dream that she was French. But she is. You'd discover that after you knew her awhile. Never would you expect to find a more efficient girl. She has a string of "E's" a mile long. Ruth is one of the quietest, brightest girls in our class. During her senior year we have learned to know her very well for she is not so bashful any more.

"Dot" is a vertable heart breaker among the men and a darling among the girls. That's a "rep" very unusual; for it is seldom that a girl can be equally popular with both sexes. "Peppy", pretty, and friendly Dorothy has become one of the most popular and best liked girls in her class.

Lelia is never alone. Before her "steady" came along she always had a host of girls at her heels, but now she is pretty busy with (?). Lelia is one of our most capable seniors. As a social leader she can't be beat. If you want any rules or laws of etiquette consult her. She is a regular "Mrs. Lord Chesterfield".—At your service.

Carl has surprised us more perhaps than any member of this class. When he started into Huntington High, a shy little freshie, he was so unobtrusive and unnoticed that we never dreamed that he would blossom forth as he did. Behold! His senior year showed him partaking enthusiastically in all social events of the class. We never will forget the lovely time we had at his house about Hallowe'en time and then he became sport editor of the "World". But greatest of all triumphs, he sallied forth with one of our best known senior beauties.

Martha is our clever efficient editor-in-chief of this annual. Her efforts to make this volume a success were unstinted and we can not praise her too much although Mattie is a hard worker that does not render her less capable of enjoying herself. She is brimming over with "pep" so anyone who knows her will tell you. We prophesy a great literary career for her. About ten years from now when we are reading a famous novel of the biblical or Roman periods and we look at the name of the author we'll see "McCrum". Then we'll think of our Mattie who used to go about these halls with both eyes peeled for people who had the ability to hand a "line" for the Modulus.

Charles is very unobtrusive and proper if you don't know him; but don't think he always maintains that mask of meekness, quietness due to propriety. "Fur be it from such." He's in all the deviltry ever heard of. His complexion is the envy of boys and girls alike.

A brilliant student, a clever actress and a perfect athlete are certainly three attributes seldom possessed by one person; but Eloise is just that person. When she says she will do anything she does it and does it to a finish. As "Mrs. Carr" in "Stop Thief" she made a perfect mature lady. Never would you believe that sedate, elderly "Mrs. Carr" was the graceful Eloise, the star of Miss Grayston's gym classes. She was adorable. Eloise is planning to enter Western Reserve college after leaving us. We are sure they will appreciate her as much as we have.

"Isn't he got good looking hair?" a strange girl was heard to remark, about Victor. Yes indeed! Vic's "permanent" wave withstands hail, rain, and sweat to an admirable degree. Vic has always been more or less indifferent to girls or anything but basket ball until wee "lil" Kathlyne came along and Vic just had to "fall". The high school athletes were glad to include Victor for his speed, strength and cleanness on the basket ball floor have made him a real star. Gym, track and basket ball next year will miss him very much.

When you are walking down Jefferson street some day and you see a large dark green "Olds" glide by with a host of laughing girls crowded into its roomy seats, notice jolliest of them all running the car—that's Lucile. She always has a host of girls with her. She has done some tall hustling in order to graduate with us but she has won, and we are indeed glad to have her as an additional "twentie."

"Silence" is a clear complete characterization of Myron. Altho he has been with us ever so long, he has remained rather unknown to us because of his quietness. But we know even if he is bashful and is not in possession of a "million dollar" line, as a few of our number have he thinks a great deal. Quiet, kindly and a true gentleman, he is sure to make good.

When you see a perfectly wonderful girl whose hair is in perfect order and whose complexion looks like a "Woodbury" girl. You'll know that's Ruth. She shines in gym work and all the athletic sports she can get into. In volley ball and basket ball she is equally adept. Ruth's wit, string of "E's", and good looks have won her an undisputed place in our hearts. She has only been with us a short time. We only wish we could have had her all four years. It is hard to say what she'll be; a French instructor or a gym teacher but whatever she takes up we are sure she will succeed.

After getting "canned" and then taken back into our fold several times Carl has at last acquired the necessary credits to graduate. He always has had a "rep" for mischief but has settled down surprisingly in his last year. Why he was able to leave us in January with all of his obstacles.

Kathlyne is one of our "small in size only" kind. From making a typewriter click off the words at fifty words per minute to playing Beethoven with the master touch, Kathlyne is equally adept. She also proved herself a huge success in "Stop Thief". It is hard to say which of these many things she does the best.

Elmira is one of the few girls who can keep her school work up A No. I. and still have her regular three dates a week, not to say a word about all the good times she has with the girls. She's very pretty; quite enough to turn her head, but she is as unconsciously at ease about it as can be.

It seems that the class of '20 is blessed with business men and women. To see quiet Carl Zinc pass quietly thru his four years of high school you never would have guessed that he was so aggressive. Why he simply eats up his competitors. No one "pulls the wool" over Carl's eyes in a business deal. He proved on the "world" staff that this was true. And look how essential to McCaffrey's he is. As a clear thinker, Carl ranks second to no one in this magnificent class.

The chief characteristic of Mildred is her pride in the fact that "Dutch" is her brother. They do make a very intellectual pair, for Mildred makes a splendid substitute for "Dutch" when he's out racing their fliver. But with all her efficiency Mildred's right there when there's a good time on hand. Mildred is going to be a music teacher and as a teacher of this euphonious art she will be a decided success.

My! can't that fellow play some fast game! "Get 'im. Thrift Stamps!" Those are a few of the enthusiastic remarks aimed at Bob when he descends to the basket ball floor and lays his opponent in the shade so deep that a 3,000 wt. flash light wouldn't rouse him. We are proud to have Bob as a member of our class; for his deep interest in athletics and sincerity have won him a warm place in the heart of the school and made him one of the favorite among the boys. But his numerous acquaintances have seen less and less of him during the last year. Thelma has him most of the time.

Fred's chief hobbies are hunting—er—namely—game. Of course his love for the fair sex caused his acquaintances no little concern (??) for he does love the girls so much he has so far managed to show up with every lesson completed which shows his versatility. Many of the other H. H. S. "Romeo's" might make him their example.

To any one who eats at the H. H. S. cafeteria Letha is a familiar personage. Her cullinary accomplishments are famed far and wide. Few people can boast of such a good looking profile and such reddish gold hair. She is a rural "Billie Burke." As a domestic science teacher she will wear a high place and no doubt a man may "fall" for her because of her delicious "eats."

Hayden is rather quiet but if there's anything to be done Hayden is the fellow. He is not only one of our best athletes, but also a promising literary man. Our last two annuals have borne more than one evidence of his talent. So we hold great hopes for a brilliant career for him.

Lucile boasts of being the little sister of our well-known athlete Harry, or better known as old "nuxuated". Lucile's greatest characteristic is her smile that never wears off. She has been with us only a short time, but during that time she has earned a very high place in our midst.

Ernest is the last remnant of the famous "five" of '19 and a member of the splendid team of '20. When he turns out for a game his opponents quake from fear, for he is always ready to put up a good fight. May he always keep up the old morale. It will stand him in good need.

Bill's chief sources of trouble are his curly hair and his stomach. Both cause him no little worry and trouble. Bill and Parnell McGreevy, constitute a twentieth century "David and Jonathan". Never do you see one that you don't see the other. Sh—Grape nuts—There's a reason. Gresta and Mildred are fast friends.

C—C is a complete characterization of John Lewis. Conventionality—common sense are his most noticeable characteristics. He tells us that he's going to study commerce and law, which will enable him to become a lawyer of greater possibilities. When we hear of a big Sears and Roebuck or Marshall Field law case being won we will probably see that the winning of the case was due to the ingenuity of the famous incorporation lawyer—John Lewis Kenower.

Here is one of the brilliant seniors who raked up the necessary "thirty-two" to leave us in three and one-half years. Plumb, affable, and courteous he has made himself one of the best liked of the "twenties". Let us extend our best wishes in the hope that he may succeed in his business as he did in getting along with the students and the faculty.

Mabel is our latest acquisition. She came to us from Columbia City and because of her brilliancy in classes was destined not to remain long in obscurity. Her chief characteristics are her industry and flame colored hair. Red-haired people always attract attention and Mabel proved worthy of it in more ways than one.

No doubt you have seen a little girl in the third floor rest room arranging a very bewildering mass of rebellious black curls. That's Hilda. She is another of our new 1920 members. Altho she was with us only a very short time and we have not learned to know her a great deal we do know that she is a very entertaining pleasant addition to our class.

KALEIDOSCOPE '20

CLASS PROPHECY

As nearly as I can remember
'Twas a cold blustery day in November,
When, after eating my fill of turkey and pie,
I sank into a chair and heaved a great sigh,
But whether or not 'twas the weight of the sigh,
The amount of the turkey, or that last piece of pie,
No one will know. Alas, the chair I thot so stout
Groaned under the weight and at once gave out,
Letting me fall to the floor, hitting my head,
While above little birds appeared and fled.
Then behold! there appeared on the floor by my side,
A new pair of boots that were just the right size.
They were seven-leagued boots as I very soon learned,
And an intense desire within me burned
To see some old friends who with me graduated,
And who now no doubt, held positions elevated.
I pulled on the boots, and away I did go,
Hitting the high places, and once stubbing my toe.
I fell with a crash right into a town,
And there on the street sat Geraldine Brown.
She was cranking her grind organ with a great show of muscle,
Which she used on husband Finn when they got in a tussle.
In front of a building I stopped for a look,
And saw our aged class president poring over a book.
Wilbur now was a minister of great renown,
And had preached in every city, burg, and small town.
I was told by a newsboy who stood at my right
Where Rev. Cook would hold services that night.
So then without any further hesitation
I immediately embarked for the place of the meeting.
Imagine my surprise when I got in the door,

And saw Vera McClelland up on the floor,
Warbling away till she made my head roar,
"Pull for the Shore, Brothers, Pull for the Shore."
I heard that Vera travelled as Rev. Cook's "Big Singer",
Well, did you ever, but she was one humdinger.
Then I saw Hotel d'Patterson not far away,
So I hurried over and made preparations to stay.
Next morning Jeanette came along with the bill,

And from its size she could easily afford another hotel,
But then in order to appease my anger,
She told me of a certain Miss Myrtle Weber,
Who was stopping over and had rented a fine suite,
As she had become a chiropodist and examined folks' feet,
Until, at last, my curiosity being aroused,
I climbed up the stairs to where Miss Myrtle was housed
And entered! and of all things! what did I see
But Myrtle down on the floor on one knee
Vigorously examining Ruth LaVine's feet.
Ruth herself was perched up in a very high seat.
Both greeted me cordially when I went in,
And Myrtle immediately said that 'twas a sin
To wear tight shoes. This I already knew,
And refused to have my feet attended to.
Then leaving Myrtle we went down the street
And Ruth told me that she too, knew something about feet.
After walking along we came to a sign,
Which said "The Shoe Shining Parlor of Miss Ruth LaVine."
A little to the right and just above it,

Hung the sign of a dentist, Miss Margaret Lovett.
At this I manifested great surprise,
Left Ruth, and went up, but couldn't believe my own eyes,
For there as her victim strapped in the chair,
Was a white-headed man, namely Monsieur Smetzaire.
Above his head she waved some savage looking pincers
And—just at this instant in walked Virginia Spencer,
Who purchased a set and a half of false teeth,
The whole for herself, the half for Mr. Smith,
I stood at the crossroads and looked down Peak's pike
And saw plowing up the dust, a crazy little Ike.
Coming nearer I saw it was Charley Stouder,
Who was acting as agent for Amiss' face powder.
I then started on, this time for Europe,
And saw at the Buckingham poor Irene Rupert,
Irene had married when yet very young.
And chosen as a husband Lawrence Carlson.
She said they lived in a hit or miss fashion,
And I judge that it was more hit than miss by her actions.

Susie Anson then went riding past
On top of an elephant, that went just as fast,
As such steeds have a tendency to go.
Susie had married the prince of Morocco,
They were in London on the important expedition,
Of purchasing steel fishing rods for some monks in a mission.
Entering a school room, there arrayed in black satin
Was Lelia Steele conducting a French class in Latin.
"Why do you wear black?" I asked in surprise,

And great tears sprang to the poor woman's eyes.
"My dear friend," she's sobbed with her head on my shoulder,
"Albert worked in a quarry and there a great boulder,
Fell on his foot and very soon after
He caught chicken-pox and hence the disaster.
And say did you know that Honorable John Austin,
Was running an air line from London to Boston?"
Then I strode on and saw the dearest of girls,
Catherine Zahm who'd spent ten years perfecting false curls.
Again I proceeded and saw over in Paris,
Clara E. Strodel and her husband Myron Harris
Running a ten cent store on the incorporated plan,
And 'twas a success, Myron being a fine business man.
Mr. Creager surrounded by people galore,
Demonstrated Hawaiian music on the top floor
Of John Wolf's "Old Iron and Junk Shop."
I was so surprised, my eyes—Well, they popped.
That night I decided to call on Miss Keller
And finally found her inhabiting a cellar.
She had as her maid Miss Mildred Gardiner,
Who was considering the adoption of the name of "Fleener."
Elvin was Chef to the head of that nation
And the 'eats' he fixed sent him into spasms.
After conversing with Helen a very short while,
In walked her husband, I tried not to smile,
But he was none other than Hayden Tobias
Who proved a good match for her, he being so pious.
She told me Grace Crist had gone to the Orient,
And now was in charge of the Chinese Government,
Before this, she had been busy converting the heathen,
But stopped. She couldn't remember their lingo one season.
Then hark! we heard such tremendous uproar.
The breaking of furniture, the bang of a door.
At once our door opened, in came Agnes Murray,
She could scarcely talk she was in such a hurry.
"I'm leaving tonight," at last she announced.
The door opened again and in Victor bounced.
"Go on home," said Hayden, "you miserable sinner."
I couldn't believe it, but 'twas Victor Skinner.
Helen showed me a picture of Eloise Miles,
Who lived in New York and demonstrated French styles.

She related the tragedy of Mabel Bonebrake,
Who fell on her head when learning to skate.
Carl Adsit, a lawyer, was admitted to bar
But failed. He now drove the west-bound street car.
And Marie McCarty had married Paul Hurdle;
They went driving one day when their truck turned turtle.
This act proved disastrous for poor Marie,
But 'twasn't long till Paul was on bended knee,
Begging LaVina to assume Marie's position,
As LaVina herself was the "queen of creation".
Then Lucille Brock and Walter Grupe
Were long since married and parted "whoopee".
Lucile set a coal hod on Walter's best hat
So Walter, the scamp, skipped out just for that.
Bright and early next morning I took my departure,
Hurried to Siam and saw Agnes Becker

Living in state at the palace at Bangkok.
I was so astonished I just stood and gawked.
Travelling north up long Lena River,
I spied Lucile Mehre hunting whale liver.
Living for the summer in Validovostok,
I met the fashion queen, formerly Miss Fox.
Delbert Hier, she introduced as her "much worse half".
He was so meek and submissive, I just had to laugh.
There too, I hear the world-famous trio,
Composed of Fred Swain, Bill Adams and Helen Harlowe
I stopped in Warsaw, there stirring Lenine's gravy,
Was that little Irish fellow, yes, Parnell McGreevy.

I was attracted by the name of John Lewis Kenower
Which appeared on a sign on McGreevy's back door.
It said Mr. Kenower was lecturing that night,
On "How to Improve Infant Ground Moles' Sight."
Down in Italy seated at St. Mark's organ,
Playing like sixty, was an old friend Ruth Morgan.
In one corner sat Miss Mabel Tharp,
Playing "Ti'l We Meet" on an old Jew's harp.
In Venice I saw Letha Sparks' "Three Ring Show",
And who it was run by you'd never know
Unless you knew Herbert Buzzard before
He went in to train small lions to roar.
Robert Wonderly served as his first assistant
And as Bob's better-half served Thelma Enyeart.
Marcella Dougherty mixed up the dough
They fed to the animals; they must live you know.
A physician, Dr. Carl Stults, by name,
Doctored the beasts when they felt any pain.
Down a canal Dorothy Booth steered a gondola,
While in one end Carl Holsworth played the victrola.
Here Roswell Brown lived a quiet retired life,
With the girl who had, while in school, been his wife.
The next afternoon, over in Brazil,
When wandering the streets I had a slight chill.
Then, thinking it would do no great harm,
I rushed to the first house to ask to get warm.
And sakes alive! what do you think I saw,
Why, Don Ream laying down the law
To his disobedient but sweet-tempered spouse,
Who was, in high school, Elmira Strauss.
Elmira told me, after Don had left home,
Where I could locate a friend, Martha McCrum.
I then hurried on and as Don's wife had said,
I found Martha trying to stand on her head.
She righted herself when I entered her flat,
And said her actions didn't signify anti-fat,
But that she was instructing a class in gymnastics,
And they didn't learn fast enough not being elastic.
I looked over the class and saw Howard Hoch,
Who, from his actions seemed ready to choke,
I at once called Martha's attention to the fact,
She looked, and said, Mary Henry hit 'im in the back."
Kathlyn Kitt who was Martha's secretary, tho married,
Kept track of the black and blue marks each class member carried.
Mildred Steman headed a matrimonial bureau,

She had served herself first as we were all made to know.
Paul Shipley was editor-in-chief of a sheet
That contained nothing but the high cost of meat.
Hubert Beaver had located in Alaska, at Juno,
After coaxing Mildred to abandon the Bureau.
Going then to Africa, I saw Sir Carl Zinc,
Conducting sight-seers around an old sphinx,
Cornelia Earhart was governing Sierre Leone,
And things were run in the ground, I was told by Don Jones.
The Jones Co. designed clothes for bellicose Chief Piatt.
Hilda Williams said his visits always terminated in a riot.

I saw myself living near the city of Capetown,
Gathering ostrich feathers for the people at home.
Then—ouch! suddenly I awoke with a jerk,
My hand hit a pin and oh, how it hurt,
The boots had gone, so had the stars,
I seemed as far away as the Earth is from Mars.
I sat up, then came back to earth with a thump.
Wide awake, I felt as green as a Gump.
Now people, I know you'll say this thing is a scream.
I disagree. It's a Thanksgiving day dream.

CLASS OF "21"

Isn't this some junior class! A class of which to be proud? Just look at our picture and you can easily see that it was no great task for us to accumulate sufficient credits to attain the rank of a Junior and oh—it's great to be "just a Junior." All you have to do is just work and have a good time. You do not have to spend your time looking for class rooms, like the Freshman or take the kidding of the Sophs, nor are we burdened with the dignity and responsibilities of the Seniors; so we have had a pleasant year, not forgetting our social ambitions which have attracted many upper classmen as well as under classmen to our midst. The only "fly in the ointment" or in other words the only thing to mar an otherwise perfect year was the persistency of the Seniors in sampling our refreshments.

At the beginning of the year, Ralph Bonebrake was chosen chairman of the Junior Committee with Bernice Griffith and Nelson Wasmuth as his assistants. Miss Ewing was chosen class advisor and it was thru their efforts that we were able to give the Seniors a royal reception.

—Cecil Rittgers '21.

Who has seen or even heard of an 8-2, Freshman, Sophomore or Senior that can:

Talk like Lucius Tuttle?
Whistle like Helen Thomas?
Vamp like Ruth Drover?
Play basket ball like "Bones"?
Look as well in overalls as Kenny Ware?
Have such pink cheeks as Frances Young?
Comb hair like Mildred Whiteside?
Translate Cicero like LeRoy Oswalt?
Lisp like Vera Dinius?
Roll pennies like Bishop Applegate?
Giggle like Edith Mercer?
Kill time like Dubby Johnson?
Sing like Hazel Rose?
Raise scandal like "Bill" Mayer?
Commit authors like Gresta Kepplinger?
Play the piano like Carl Wasmuth?
Recite Geometry Propositions like Erwin Summers?
Write poetry like Cecil Rittgers?
Throw chalk like Dale Stetzel?
Be as good looking as Nelson Wasmuth?
Play hockey and get by with it like "Ikey Poinier"?
Remember dates (history) like Edward Snyder?
Have such cases of unrequieted love as Mary Young?
Get such "cases" as Randall Dippell?
Blush like Porter Stults?
Sleep in school like Harley Briggs?
Get Chemistry like Gordon Cook?
Drive such wonderful cars as Charles Thomas?
Or be as all around good class as the Juniors?

SOPHOMORE CLASS

The sophomore class of '22 will be the most prominent men and women of the times. Although love-sick at parties they get along as veterans. This class is loved by all the teachers, through their hard work and special attention to recitations.

The class was organized rather late in the year, but after it had organized the committees and the chairman were the best to be had in the school.

The sophomore boys are worthy opponents of the upper classmen; while the girls are the most active crowd in school.

—Earl Fulton '22.

SOPHOMORE CLASS POEM

We are now fairly started on the road to Fame
And in only two years more,
We'll have caught up with the wily Dame
Regarding distainfully the days of yore.

"That must be the brilliant Senior class,"
This from a visitor one day,
As the Sophomore class in a body
Passed proudly on their way.

Of course we know we're brilliant
Can you blame this self conceit?
Why, we've known ever since we were Freshies
That we simply can't be beat.

We shine in all our classes
Like modest fairy folk.
Geometry was more than easy
Caesar was but a joke.

Now Stemen had us guessing
We thought he'd be a fright
But like the dog in the story,
His bark was worse than his bite.

In English we were usually bright
And we made no trouble or fuss
We wonder if this is the reason why
Miss Johnson was so good to us.

I could write on forever
Telling of deeds we can do,
But you will learn of them later
When we graduate in '22.

FRESHMEN

Speak gently to us Freshmen.
We are very timid yet.
The Fairy stories told in childhood,
We cannot quite forget.
You too were once a freshman
And just as green as we,
So speak not to us harshly,
But treat us tenderly.

POMPEIAN NIGHTS

Episode I

NCE upon a time in a far away country there dwelt a beautiful maiden whose name was "Djer-Kiss". She was a real "Day Dream". Every one who gazed upon her beauty admitted that. Don't think that she was one of these "made up" kind of girls. No sir! She lived in a "Garden Court" where "Nature's Own" charms could make her the lovelier. So she would sit in her beautiful little garden and dream of a prince charming who would come to her; while the "Mavis" sang its song of wistful love to her.

One day as she sat by the "Woodbury" hedge reading about "Mary Garden" she started up in surprise. For before her stood a wonderful man; just like the prince of her dreams. He was clothed in royal purple and wore a wondrous doublet of purple embroidered in Pussy Willow silk and silver sheen.

"Djer-Kiss" was so bewildered at first that she could only gaze at him.

"Are you angry, my "Egyptian Flower"? Did I disturb you?"

"Nay, nay," she replied, "but who are you who come so suddenly upon me?"

"You do not recognize my coat of arms?" he asked.

"I'm afraid not," she replied.

"I am the "Pompeian" prince."

And then for three short hours "Djer-Kiss" and her "Pompeian" prince whiled away the time and then he mounted his fine steed, "Luxor" and rode away; but with a promise that he would return next day.

The morrow dawned fair and beautiful. The "Garden Fragrance" added to the atmosphere of this lovers' haven. The beautiful "Djer-Kiss" was arrayed in the best clothes she could obtain from her simple wardrobe.

But to "Pompeian's" enamoured gaze she was the lovelier for her simplicity. He could only gaze at her at first without saying a word. "Desiree" was in his eyes, in his burning lips. Love almost overcame him.

"Djer-Kiss", he breathed, "you are "Peerless"!

"My prince charming, you flatter me!" she said softly while slyly gazing into the "Pond" at her feet, that she might see her own "skin you love to touch".

"My "Lotus Flower!" he breathed. "I love you! love you," he sighed. Will you be my "Fiancee?"

"Pompeian," she sobbed, "I want you to "Love Me", but I have two great obstacles before me. I can never be your "Adoree."

"Why, in the name of "Freeman"! we'll see why not. I vow that you shall be mine if I have to be ground to splinters and "sifted thru silk" to win you. Tell me all about it, love!" he exclaimed.

"Well, you see my mother, "Melba", objects because I am "Sempre Giovine" for my age, and greater than that my brother must be rescued from the terrible torture he is going thru now, before I may marry any man."

"And who is your brother?" asked "Pompeian".

"Palm Olive." replied "Djer-Kiss". "He is ensnared by a very powerful and evil enchantress named "La Blanche", whose domains are guarded by a terribly fierce dragon called "Sanitol", who spits a dazzling light which even on the darkest night, makes everything appear "tint Naturalle". There is also a miserable, wicked, dwarf who is short and fat, wears a blue gown, white apron and cap and carries a powerful policeman's billy. She is known as "Old Dutch" and she cleans up on anything or anybody that dares enter "LaBlanche's" territory."

"Enough! I will rescue your brother!" exclaimed the impetuous prince.

"But let me tell you more about him!" she exclaimed. He has been changed from a man into a dog. You will recognize the dog I am sure. It is a pure white wolf hound and answers to the call of "Colgate".

"But dearest, how did you learn all of that?"

"I once spied into her domain. My friend "Jonteel" and I dressed ourselves as scullery maids and entered "LaBlanche's service. We learned that much; but her prime minister, "Mr. Packer Tarr" discovered that we were from "La France" and it was just thru providence that we escaped. I implore you "Sweetheart" beware of "Packer Tar" and Captain "Resinol" the commander of the "Red Cross" guard. They are as efficient as the Scotland yards police force in ferreting out "LaBlanche's enemies."

"I promise you to carry out faithfully what I have promised to do. Your brother shall be returned safely to you. And before leaving "Djer-Kiss", will you promise to always "Love Me"? And remain true to me until I return at least. If I fail———— I shall never set foot in this country again but if I succeed which I almost know I shall do, you will be mine, "Djer-Kiss".

And then a tender like wisp of "Djer-Kiss' " hair like a dreamy "Caprice" carressed his cheek. Her "Splendor" and nearness to him brought a fierce wave of tenderness to his heart. Tenderly he took her in his arms and kissed fiercely, expressively, lingeringly. The "Jap Rose" in her hair was no more colorful than her blushing cheek; "Dorothy Vernon" never returned a kiss with more feeling.

Years have passed. Pompeian won his quest. "Colgate" lives happily with his pretty Spanish wife "Carmen". While "Pompeian" has won his sweet "Djer-Kiss" and fulfilled her "Day Dream".

SENIOR BOB PARTY

With the snow just about that deep, and the mercury going as far to the bottom as possible and not get lost—the Seniors decided on a Bob Party. All gathered at the City Library and there "piled in" the Bobs—after a long and very enjoyable ride we were all invited to the home of Miss Florence Weiford where we received a warm welcome—the remainder of the evening was spent with music, dancing and games—after which refreshments were served.

The Senior Class entertained the "Senior Cast" at a Theatre Party at the Perfect Theatre, after which they all enjoyed refreshments at the Olympia Candy Kitchen. (Why not Nicks?)

PARTY

One of the "peppiest" parties of this year was held at the home of Jeanette Patterson on Byron Street. The evening was spent in a very novel way. Fortune telling and "kweer" spiritualistic stunts were among the main features of the evening; music and games also holding a high place. John Lewis Kenower amused the crowd by his "Lord Chesterfieldian" ways of eating ice cream. Take lessons from him.

Everyone was eager to consult the Ouija Board concerning their future happiness. which of course pointed out some very thrilling adventures for some of them. The party was ended with very dainty refreshments.

M. R. S.

HALLOWE'EN PARTY

Many ghastly, wierd figures assembled at the Library Friday night and were transported in the Hurdle truck and various cars to the Stults home in the country, where they all enjoyed a delightful evening, after unmasking it was discovered that they were Seniors of the H. H. S. enjoying their first social function of the year.

FRIDAY MORNING PROGRAMS

Friday September 12.

The first of the Friday morning programs was held in the High School auditorium. We all sang some "peppy" songs and rounds, after which Mr. Byers gave us a talk about the constitution and by-laws of Huntington High School; our general behavior, and the terrible results if we erred from the "straight and narrow" way.

Friday September 19.

Rev. Angus gave a very inspirational talk to the student body of the high school.

Friday September 26.

The High School was surprised and agreeably entertained by a speech from Miss Helen Keller on the subject of "Intellectual Beauty". Helen's talk displayed along with real genius in construction a real power of observation and feeling.

Friday November 8.

The High School body was very agreeably surprised by the announcement that the High School paper "The High School World", was out. After a very convincing talk by Lawrence Carlson we all decided that there never was a publication like the new "High School World" and yielded a very willing nickel to devour its contents.

Mr. Byers placed a damper upon our present hiliarty by any demonstrations of brotherly or sisterly love. We cannot lock arms etc. (?) in the halls. Still worse if we are guilty of the great crime of procrastination (tardiness) we will spend the sixth period in hard labor. No rest for the wicked.

Friday October 3.

The Program was opened by the High School singing "The Star Spangled Banner." (Vocal Instruction included). A very interesting talk was given by Lieut. Henry Bash who has seen service "over there" has been wounded and taken prisoner by the Germans. His talk was principally based upon his experiences from the war.

Friday October 10.

A program of unusual interest was that given under the auspices of the Civics Department. Two special musical numbers were rendered—one by the High School Orchestra; the other by an instrumental quartet.

The debate was on "Resolved that we should relinquish our claims on the Philippines" proved to be most gripping. The Debate was as follows:

Affirmative	Negative
Martha McCrum	Susie Anson
Lawrence Carlson	John Wolf.

Judges
Mr. Mahoney
Miss Cox
Miss Altman.

Although both sides handled the subject well the affirmative sur-passed the negative by far in points and delivery. This debate proved that rare, capable argument ability, can be displayed by woman as well as man.—sh. Some human nature.

Friday February 26.

The student body met in the high school auditorium to hear some special announcements. The meeting, owing to the impromptu decision of having it, was without any special numbers. The orchestra played "America" but the high school in general had not awakened enough to put any "pep" behind it and the orchestra felt about like the "choir-audience" assembly. Swihart made some explanations about his concert for Wednesday night. He said that the people who heard it would hear a dollar concert for fifteen cents. At the word of a bargain; a few sleepy girls stirred, sat up and took note.

Mr. Byers and Mr. Stemen made their announcements after which the meeting closed.

Friday April 24.

The student body of H. H. S. was fortunate enough to procure Dr. Stafford; president of Marion college. His talk did not fail to find a place of interest with anyone. Especially the seniors found his speech of vital interest; for it brought to them the thought that next year they would have something else to worry about besides getting out of hookey scrapes.

Thursday April 23.

The "Bank Day" movement which is being started in every school has at last been introduced in Huntington high school. Mr. Stout spoke to us and urged everyone to become thrifty and perhaps become a second "Astor" or "Vanderbilt".

Tuesday March 11.

Ross Crane, the well known artist and lecturer gave an illustrated lecture before the student body of H. H. S. His lecture was very interesting. The bits of humor and the illustrations with the talk were enjoyed by every one.

Mr. Crane spoke about seeing the beauty in the common little things about us; and impressed upon his audience that the amount that we really saw was the amount that we really lived. Without question it was one of the most worthwhile, interesting programs we have had the privilege to attend.

Friday April 30.

In honor of the day set aside for Americanization, the student body of the High School was called to the Auditorium, to hear some papei and talks by the students.

All of the subjects were Americanization and the speakers were;

Dorothy Bell Finley
Donald Jones
Edna Snyder
John Lewis Kenower
Martha McCrum
Cecil Rittgers,
and Fred Mahoney.

ONE OF OUR BEST PROGRAMS

It was a great privilege to have William Ammesbury entertain us this morning. His beautiful tribute to the Hoosier poet, James Whitcomb Riley and the impersonations and interpretations of Riley's poems and his realistic characters were splendid. No one who heard the program could help loving the Hoosier poet and knowing him in a way which they had never known him before. Mr. Ammesbury's personal friendship with the poet gave a personal appeal to his talk and interpretations. Everyone agreed that it was among the most splendid entertainments we have had the pleasure to attend.

MRS. LESH GIVES READINGS

Mrs. Eben Lesh entertained the H. H. S. by some of her clever readings Friday morning. The speaker needs no introduction to the Huntington public as she is very well known through her literary and oratorical pursuits. Among her most appreciated selections was the famous "Renunciation" extract from "Jean Val Jean".

MISS OTT SPEAKS TO GIRLS

The Senior girls assembled in the High School auditorium to hear Miss Ott of the Red Cross. In her convincing direct-to-the-point way she showed the great demand and greater possibilities for any one taking up nursing. Holding many an enviable position in her profession and having started from the bottom and worked up she knew exactly what she was talking about. These vocational lectures are always appreciated.

Apply this test to yourself and see if you are mentally qualified to be a member of this high school.

Can you get to class exactly one-tenth of a minute before the bell?
Why were pass slips invented?
Who is Virgie Heaston?
Do your excuses get by?
Has anyone suspected you of having any brains?
Do you find it essential to have all of your lessons?
(This may be embarrassing, but it's a sure test.)
When is it diplomatic to ask a favor?

THE SUNSHINE SOCIETY

The Sunshine Society is an organization which has been a decided success from the first year of its organizing in 1915 to its present, 1920. The cordial big sister attitude of the upper class girls toward the lower class girls has caused not a little comment from other schools. This is largely due to the efforts of the Sunshine Society.

In many little ways, such as the "lost and found" committee, visiting committee and the committee to see after the sick, they have spread sunshine in the small dark places.

At the end of the year 1919 the following officers were elected and chosen:

President ..... Ruth Morgan
Vice President ..... Myrtle Weber
Secretary ..... Vera McClelland
Treasurer ..... Edith Mercer

FABLES.

1915 B. P.—2520 A. P.

"One time, many years ago, before prohibition, there lived a man who had great wealth and many friends. He was the possessor of the magnificent income of one thousand two hundred dollars per annum," says the legend. "Almost every day he went to a movie and otherwise indulged in riotous passtimes, a hamberger sandwich and a daily glass of beer with an occasional glass of whiskey or 'Vin rough' and cigarettes." Here the prehistoric instinct of the student of ancient history caused him to seize with vicious eagerness the wineglass containing lemonade (1-2 per cent lemon juice); he swallowed it savagely and was thrown into a violent fit of coughing. "No George, it's no use, not another cubeb today!"

There was once a king by the name of Golzabo and that old codger had more jack than 3-4 of the people inside and outside of the castle walls. Honest boy he had so much that every time he put his hand in his pocket he found a nickle, or a dime and in these days you went out and picked a suit of clothes off a palm tree, eggs were 40 for a cent, and they gave potatoes away.

Well as I was saying when I was interrupted, when this old dude kicked the can they sure did have some swell reunion, they drank red pop and caroused around in an awful shape, for music they had everything from the Bippus Band to Swihart's Orchestra, and Bill Adams with a Jew's harp, while Mick Hurd and Myself played 'Nobody Knows How Dry I Am' on a shoe horn. Of course you may think that we were there to mourn. We were not, we were there for the kale. And what I mean is that the kale flowed like liker in Cuba.

Everything that the old boy had was gold from his false teeth to his daughters hair, it wasn't gold exactly but it cost the Old Duke 78 seeds for peroxide. But you see he gits it at a reduced price bein as he has the Royal hare dier die the stuff.

Now there was a young duke who was sparkin the king's daughter but the old king has about as much use for him as they would for Bryan if he went down to Cuba, and started to speak on the evil influence of liker. But this boy he ain't got no iron dollars, fact of the matter he is so poor that he sells his old shoe string tensils to M. Zinn & Co., for old iron.

Now this young buck needed some Kale as he was going to get his princess a box of Keefe & Cooks chocolates the kind that George dishes out they are perty good, you see I bought a box there once (Once). i never have no more money.

Hess askes me for some kale, well I dishes it out to him, that is some of the money that I borrewed from Charles Stouder, and do you know that young Buck right after the old man hands in his checks goes up here and marries the queen's daughter becomes a son-in-law to the dead king and forgits that he ows me ten sense.

Moral: Never loan money to a bird going with the kings daughter.

—M. T. CREAGER.

And once in a little, thriving, industrious two by four metropolis named Huntington, a gang of citizens "gone" on the subject of education, and otherwise fanatic, made a high school.

But they didn't stop there, my no. The pupils had gobs of fun and parties and roamed the halls and talked. And they had nerve, those offsprings of those stern old pioneers.

But the teachers said, "Cut it! can that stuff, we haven't got time, and the building is too small."

They liked to dance and shock the virtuous inhabitants of that jazzless village in the wilderness, but the school board said "no!" And then those ingenuous beings conceived the idea of getting necessary exercise and at the same time indulging in the pleasurable pastime, of strolling arm in arm through the halls. But the "Fates" otherwise decreed.

The school board was going to find it necessary to build that erroneous, but enthusiastic, sincere and ever increasing student body, a new building in which they could play too, under supervision.

And they built a new building and the pupils all moved in and ——— ——— "tweet-tweet, pretty birdie!" "Aw, wake up, you nut!"

Frankly Speaking:

A test is a written admission that you don't know anything.

Charles Stouder's perpetual grouch is a false impression.

Miss Nell Johnson's "terrible temper" is not a camouflage.

Ed Snyder's dignified "aloofness" all a bluff.

John L. Kenower's "ethiel theories" mere pretense.

Mildred Stemen's marriage a mistake.—Poor Lawrence.

Lelia Steele's innocent "stare" just about all it's supposed to be.

Martha's perversity not always working.

GYMNASIUM—1919—1920

Herbert J. Bussard

This was the second season that Huntington High School offered gymnasium work for both boys and girls. The work this year was naturally much superior to that of last year because of the experience of the instructors and larger supply of equipment. Much of the credit for the splendid record of our basket ball team must be attributed to their training by Suter as well as their coaching by Stemen. The gym work consisted of running, jumping, swimming, various feats on the horse, parallel bars, combination parallels and springing board, mats and various indoor games, etc.

A gymnastic exhibition given to the public on December 8, 1919, and repeated the following week for a business mens' association, the Kiwanis was a real success and met with general approval. The exhibition consisted of various feats on the horse, mats, parallel bars, combination springing board and parallel bars, and pyramids, clown stunts, and a dance, the "Highland Fling."

GIRL'S BASKET BALL

Each season sees a growth in the field of athletics at H. H. S. This is especially true in the Girl's Basket Ball and Gym. exercises of this year as it has caused its enthusiasm to rise to its limit.

A word about the Girl's Basket Ball. The Class teams were organized by Miss Webb, whom all term the "only" coach, and proved a grand success.

During the season were played eight scheduled games, with a few for good measure. The final game, played January 21, was composed of the best players taken from the four class teams, Seniors, Sophomore-Juniors, Freshman and Eight-two's. These teams were known as the Harvard and Yale Champs (the Harvard winning) sh! 10-0). This game closed the Basket-Ball tournament.

PHYSICAL CULTURE

The advancement in the different classes of Physical Training has been very rapid and extensive. This especially applies to the girls, who have had an extraordinary course, for which advancement is due to our compitent instructor, Miss Grayston.

The Girl's work consists of several branches such as apparatus work, fancy marching, folk dancing and games. Also practice teaching is given for the purpose of learning leadership.

A demonstration was given in this work by the different classes in May which was thoroughly appreciated and which proved the ability and the result of Physical Training.

BASKETBALL GAMES

Huntington 25—Fairmount Academy 23.
November 7.
There.

Huntington high opened the season with a hard fought overtime game at Fairmount academy, winning by a two point margin. Wonderly and Smith guarded their men so closely that all of the opponents shots were made from the center of the floor. Moyer starred as individual point winner, by caging nine field and three foul goals, making 21 out of Huntington's 25 points.

Anderson 38—Huntington 13
November 14.
Here.

The initial appearance of our locals in the H. S. gym did not quite come up to our expectations probably due to the fact that they were a trifle distracted by the looks of the Anderson five. However as Stemen says "Such a defeat helps point out the weaknesses." Of the 13 points scored, Moyer was accountable for 9. All the squad played a hard game and displayed a true spirit of sportsmanship until the last which contrasted very much to the manner of the visiting team. At the end of the game every member of the Anderson squad had one or more personals and three members were credited with more than two.

Huntington 15—Kokomo 13.
November 26.
There.

It was certainly a sweet revenge when our fellows were able to bring home the scalp of our noted opponents at Kokomo. Although the score was close, its smallness was enough to show that the game was fast and well guarded. Bonebrake was individual point winner.

Huntington 20—LaFayette 18.
November 28.
There.

In our second home game, everyone of our team members, fully redeemed himself to the local fans and displayed an entirely diffrent brand of playing from that of the first home game. Kriegbaum and Wonderly introduced themselves by playing an excellent game at floor work as well as Bonebrake and Moyer who found the basket for several goals under heavy guarding.

Huntington 27—Shortridge 23.
December 5.
Here.

As a third showing before Huntington fans, our squad came into the light by defeating Shortridge of Indianapolis. During the first half, Stevens of the visiting team was star man and scored all of their points. Kriegbaum entered the game in the second half and displayed tactics similar to those we used to see "Fat" use. Skinner played a fast game and scored 10 for our 27 points.

Huntington 24—Bluffton 20.
December 12.
There.

A game which reflected excellent coaching on the part of the local five was played at Bluffton on December 12. When our fellows arrived at Bluffton they were all sick except Kriegbaum from smelling alcohol (from the radiator) and were not in a condition to play. It was thru Kriegbaum's ability in breaking up passes and playing in a whirl wind style that the game ended in the score as it did.

Manual 22—Huntington 18.
There.

Manual Training high school of Indianapolis took a hard fought game from Huntington on December 20, winning by a 4 point margin. Moyer was individual point scorer having made 12 points. Kriegbaum who made such a good showing in the Bluffton game was unable to play the whole game but was substituted in the last few minutes and made a good showing. Wonderly played an excellent game both at the defense and offense. Manual had 12 personal called and the locals only registered 6 personal fouls throughout the game.

Huntington 32—Bloomington 19.
December 26.
Here.

"The best yet" was heard from fans who attended the Bloomington and Huntington game when the latter won by a brilliant offensive playing. Skinner played his best game of the season and was easily individual point winner with eight field goals to his credit. Smith, playing for the first time in three weeks, showed up exceptionally well, netting two field goals. The work of Johnson as back guard was excellent.

Huntington 47—Decatur 14.
January 3.
Here.

Decatur high school was practically swamped in their game with the locals here on January 3. From the beginning the visiting team found they were out of their class and seemed to lose hope of gaining much to their credit. Skinner went wild again and caged 8 field goals.

Huntington 24—Richmond 14.
January 9.
There.

Richmond high proved to be an easy victim for the locals when they clashed on January 9. In the first half, Moyer did all of Huntington's scoring and he tied with Skinner for individual points, each scoring five goals. Smith was substituted for Wonderly in the second half and caged a long field goal.

Rochester 21—Huntington 20.
January 16.
Here.

Rochester staged a "come back" during the last five minutes of play and defeated Huntington, in one of the most sensational games played so far, January 16. During the entire game no substitutions were made and the score was close throughout.

South Bend 25—Huntington 21.
January 23.
There.

In the first game ever played with the South Bend five, Huntington was defeated by a three point margin. At the end of the first half South Bend was leading 19-9. Johnson played during the first half and showed up well with his gritty guarding.

Huntington 34—Advance 11.
January 30.
Here.

Huntington scored an easy victory over Advance who came here with high expectations of taking the bacon. At the end of the first half the score stood 17-6 and was not even interesting during the second half due to the fact that the visitors only scored one field and five foul goals.

Anderson 43—Huntington 16.
January 31.
There

Huntington's second defeat was received from Anderson; they played on January 31. At the end of the first half the score was 18-10 showing that our fellows were able to keep up well at first, but during the last half, Moyer scored the only points made by our team.

Huntington 27—Kokomo 22.
February 6.
Here.

The second game this season with Kokomo turned out to be another victory for us although the first half ended 11-8 in the visitors' favor. Bonebrake started the scoring in the second half and Kokomo was held down to 2 field throws. Moyer netted 6 out of 6 foul throws.

Huntington 24—Decatur 19.
February 9.
There.

Although the score stood 16-8 at the end of the first half, in Decatur's favor. Huntington started leading in the second and won by a 5 point margin. The game was noted for having the largest number of personals called of any played this season. as there was 26 on the locals and 20 for the opponents.

Huntington 10—Rochester 18.
February 20
There.

After leading by a 8-4 score at the end of the first half, Huntington high was defeated by our noted opponents at Rochester, by a final score of 10 to 18. Bonebrake was injured in the second half and after he was taken from the lineup, there was only one field goal made by the locals.

STOP THIEF.

The play opens in the living room of the Carr residence at Providence, R. I., where the whole household are busily preparing for the wedding of the oldest daughter, Madge Carr, to Mr. James Cluney.

The action of the play begins when Nell is introduced as the new ladies maid to Madge. Nell is "Lady Raffle and is working with the crook Jack Doogen. She immediately starts operations by going through the pockets of William Carr's overcoat which he has absentmindedly left in the living room. She finds a ruby ring which Mr. Carr had purchased for his daughter as a wedding present and with considerable cleverness manages to slip the empty box into the pocket of the bridegroom, and he upon finding it is persuaded by his friend Dr. Willoughby into thinking that he is a kleptomaniac and has taken it unconsciously. As other valuable articles begin to disappear, James Cluney hurriedly sends for a detective whom he intends to employ as a body guard until after the wedding. In the meantime Mr. Raffles arrives upon the scene through the window and is given the house plans by the observant little Nell. At this moment Mr. Cluney enters the room, and on mistaking Doogan for the detective hands over to him some valuables and puts the case entirely in his hands.

In the meantime Dr. Willoughby has made love to Joan Carr, the second daughter, and the Minister, the Reverend M. Spelvin has been introduced by Caroline the youngest of the three daughters. As things continue to disappear (due to the arts of Doogan and Nell) Mrs. Carr becomes alarmed over the absent-minded condition of her husband and tries to conceal his infirmity from the bridegroom. An embarassing situation arises when the family discovers a stranger in their midst, but Cluney cleverly introduces Doogan as an old college friend whom he has invited for the wedding.

Just as things seem to be running smoothly again Dr. Willoughby the best man, is called away and the ceremony is again delayed. At this point Mr. Jamison, a business man, calls to redeem some bonds he has given to Mr. Carr as security. On going to the safe Mr. Carr discovers that it is empty and the family is again set into stir. Mr. Jamison declares that he has been tricked and calls in the police and swears out a warrant to search the house. Doogan cleverly swipes the warrant and thus brings proceedings to a standstill while another is being sworn out. Doogan watches his chance, grabs a revolver from the hands of a police and cries "hands up". Nell makes her get away through the window and Doogan follows while all rush out yelling "Stop Thief."

The thieves are caught as they try to slip them by returning to the house. The police, however, have missed them and they are at the mercy of the family who at first vowed to hand them over to the police. The quick-witted Doogan began to work on their sympathy by showing them they had lost nothing, that this was his last trick and his wedding day so that as the curtain fell the Rev. Mr. Spelvin was performing the marriage ceremony of Cluney and Madge, Dr. Willoughby and Joan, and Jack Doogan and Nell.

ACT II. SCENE III.—STOP THIEF

FINALE "THE YOKOHAMA MAID"

"THE YOKOHAMA MAID"

By Ruth Drover.

Among the social activities that constituted our entertainments; the High School chorus and orchestra played a prominent part through the operetta; which they gave.

The operetta was of purely Japanese setting and each role was cleverly carried out by select talent of the school.

The scene was centered in the suburbs of Yokohama, Japan; where the proud merchant father of Sing-a-Song lived. The father made a will bequeth'ng his entire estate to the daughter; only one condition to be complied with, which was that on her eighteenth birthday she must be willing to give herself in marriage to Fateddo, the mayor of Yokohama, an uncultured and everything but a beloved person.

O-Sing-a-Song res'gned to wed Fateddo. She was to receive her education in America and return on her eighteenth birthday.

She went to America; there she was wooed and won by Harry Cortcase; a young lawyer. She returned to Japan on her eighteenth birthday. Fateddo, learning the news, became a spirited participant in the "hot" argument which followed. He made every effort to lay legal claims upon the girl; but all in vain. He d'scovered that the man she married was elected as mayor before their marriage so she had complied with her fathers will, though not in the manner he anticipated. For punishment Fateddo married Tung-wago the old nurse of O-Sing-a-Song. The cast was made up of the following people.

Harry Cortcase	American lawyer	Carl Wasmuth
Tung-Waga	Old nurse	Mildred Stemen
Munon-Yu	Policeman	Virgil Kindy
O-S'ng-a-Song	The daughter	Marvel Kramer
Kissimee	Her companion	Ruth Drover
Fateddo	Mayor	Stanton Leverton
Knogudi	His secretary	Rolas Hostettler
Ah-No-Chinese	Laundryman	Maurice Scott
Stella and Hilda	American tourists	Nina Burgett and Virginia Kiracofe

The mentioned persons carried out the roles splendidly and the chorus stood firmly on its merits. Both nights the auditorium was filled to its capacity The opera was warmly accepted by all attending, as one of the best social functions of the year.

LITERARY

H. H. S. FLOWER GARDEN

From the beginning of time, flowers have held special significance to all—from the superstitious warriors of old to the sentimental lovers of the past and present.

Flowers express personalities and with this idea in mind may the reader linger for a while in the "H. H. S. Flower Garden."

Notice the "clinging vines", those girls to whom men are essential to their beings end and aim. Nothing else is of any account.

Growing in glorious array and dazzling the eyes of men are the "lotus flowers," those girls whose side-long glances of suppressed (?) emotions provoke a strange indefinable thrill.

Delving deeper yet in the shady recesses of this old garden we find the shy "bashful violets", who despite their show of modesty are there with the goods.

The "snap-dragons" who dread the approach of fickle man are always present in every school. It's consoling that we have a few of this noble type if just for the sake of variety and as amusement for the superbly contented love sick.

Sunflowers, those who always crave to be the center of attraction, are both a hindrance and a help. Imagine how the poor little bachelor buttons feel in the presence of one of them; of course we have a few woman haters.

Then too there are the "burrs" that simply would creep in. They are the kind who always imagine themselves deluged with attention or else stick to a man like chewing gum to a spit curl yet whose beaming good nature makes them well liked.

Last but not least are the "touch-me-nots" whose coy "stand-offish air" of saintliness is a mere plea to "kiss me again" and "hug me closer". You all know the still water kind.

THINGS AS THEY AIN'T.

Five minutes after the last had rung I rushed madly up the steps of H. H. S. and dashed into the first floor rest room. There I decided as long as I was five minutes late I would look into the mirror to see if I was presentable. I found Miss Cox at the mirror fixing up, so I asked her for her powder puff and lip stick.

"Sure," she said, "Go ahead and use them. Here, wait a minute and I'll darken your eye brows with this eyebrow pencil."

"Thanks awfully," I said going out the door.

I then went up stairs to my English room. Miss Johnson met me at the door and said:

"I beg your pardon for beginning class before you came but they were all so eager to get to work, well, you see, I couldn't restrain them". I told her never to let it happen again and took my seat.

She let us go to the library the latter half of the period as she didn't know any more about the lesson.

Just as I opened the door I heard Miss Weiford cry out, "Oh, every body come see the organ grinder and the monkey".

We all rushed to the window and had lots of fun watching the monkey. Some of the boys wanted to finish getting their references but Miss Wieford said they would be wasting their time, and besides she couldn't help them as the monkey was so attractive, (and incidentally the organ grinder man.)

As the classes were changing Mr. Byers stopped one of the boys and asked for a match as he wished to smoke. He asked some boys why they weren't smoking and advised them to do so.

In geometry we could all say one coralary while looking at the book, so Miss Templeton said, "I am afraid you people have been studying too hard, so you may all do as you please. Most of us played ball, while we girls took a little wagon from a little boy and took turns pedling each other toward the business district. At last we arrived at the Olympia and all ordered Bromo Seltzers.

We finally sauntered back because we all loved school so well we couldn't stay away. I found myself in gym at last Miss Grayston made the other girls go home because Marcella Friedli and I wanted to practice on the different apparatus as we were contemplating entering a circus in the spring.

As this was noon I went to Nick's Kitchen as a chaproon for Miss L. Johnson and Mr. Stemen. We had a very enjoyable meal except Miss Johnson continually worried for fear Mr. Stemen wouldn't eat enough, you know he is so thin and frail looking.

I worried continually for fear we wouldn't get back in time for my latin period. But I got back at one o'clock and between Andrew Glass and Mildred Kronmiller's reading the lesson, I thought I might be able to recite on the first line of the review.

Miss VanAntwerp called on Guy Kehler to put a translation on the board.

"WELL, Miss VanAntwerp, I would love to but I sprained my ankle on the gym floor last night and I'm afraid I might hurt it, should I attempt to walk to the board," explained Guy.

"That is perfectly all right Guy and I am sorry about your foot. It isn't very important—the translation I mean."

When I told Miss VanAntwerp I didn't have my lesson as I had gone to a party the preceding night she said it was all right and she was glad I could get social as well as mental training.

Miss Moore was all dolled up in French heeled pumps, a stylish narrow skirt and a thin georgette waist, her hair looked perfectly stunning in puffs over her ears.

We didn't have a very good time in Miss Altman's room because she insisted that we learn a new dance step. The victrola was in her room and she said she couldn't afford to lose a splendid opportunity. So she sent for Mr. Hornback and we girls (including Miss Altman) took advantage of leap year by asking for the dances. Miss Altman always asked Mr. Hornback. Don't tell any body though.

Led by Miss Altman, Miss Cox, Miss Templeton, Miss Johnson and almost the entire faculty we slid down the banisters to history.

Mrs. Poinier insisted on reading several chapters of "Dere Mable" that we might be able to understand modern war fare as well as ancient.

We then went to Chemistry but Mr. Suter said it was dry and stale. He was tired of it even if we weren't and he wanted to go to the show so we had to go. We were then forced to see Douglas Fairbanks for a whole hour.

At four o'clock they made us go home, although we wished to stay in the library and study. This was the end of a perfect??????? day.

THOMAS CARLYLE'S FIRST EFFORT TOWARD FAME AND GLORY.

The sun was going down behind the purple hills and was tinting all the world with beautiful colors of gold, rose and purple when———

"Tommy! Tommy! Yoooohooooh! My goodness! Where is that boy?"

"Oh, Jiminy fishhooks! I just got settled down and I almost got a word to rhyme with "moon". Now let's see. How does this sound?

"Oh, Angeline, thy wonders rare,
Have filled my soul with thrilling dares,
And beneath the summer moon,
I love to see you.....

"Moon, June, boon, coon, dune, soon,—what does rhyme with moon?"

The insistent voice broke in upon his poetic thoughts.

"Thomas Carlyle Brown, you had better come this minute or else I'll tell your Paw!"

This dire threat aroused him. But had she never heard the gem, "In spring a young man's fancy lightly turns to thoughts of love"?

"Yes'm, I'm comin'," replied the young and lanky youth christened Thomas Carlyle Brown, but commonly called "bean-pole" by his associates and "Tommy" by his family. and whose aspirations soared to the skies.

A few steps further along brought into view his "Maw".

"Now Tommy, there is the wood to chop, the water to bring in, etc., etc. The common "chores" of every boy.

He went obediently without any outward signs of rebelling. Inside he was heroically refusing to do those things which were a sure disgrace to his manhood. A man never cuts wood for the kitchen fire, or brings water for the dishes. He does a man's work in the big outside world. He had it! That night he would run away! Yes sir, he would. He'd show 'em that he was a man not a boy. And then when he had won a place in the world for himself why they would be glad to receive him as the returned traveller. Gee! wouldn't it be grand to have his picture in all the big newspapers—"The New York Sun", "Eggburg Times", "Peachblow Herald" etc., etc.

So that night after doing up the proverbial package containing socks, tooth-brush, change of underwear and other necessities and creeping softly down the stairs with shoes in hand, he unlocked the big outside door. This was his first night escapade and his heart was going pit-a-pat. Sssssqueak! what was that? Nothing but a mouse.

Finally after various delays he reached the lawn—it had required a good deal of will power not to go and say good-bye to Angeline of the "wonders rare". But he started off.

After stumbling along about eight miles he reached the junction point of the C. B. & C. only seven miles from Squashtown.

"Criminy, but my feet do hurt," thought our hero. Even thoughts of the glittering editorials in the large newspapers did not alleviate the pain. He sank down in a ditch. "Yowwwwwwh," he sprang up with a yell half human.

"Shut up, you young hyena. Do you want to wake the country-side?" said a hoarse voice, probably proceeding from that cold and clammy individual who had frightened him so.

Beads of perspiration stood on Tommy's brow. But he sank down breathless, scarcely knowing what he was doing.

The wretch recovered himself, and changed his tone and tactics to one of half honey and half persuasion. Please excuse me for calling you a young hyena for ye see I couldn't see your tall and manly form in the dark. Ye certainly are a big, strong man. How old are you? About thirty I should say."

Tommy puffed up unconsciously for that was his weak point, his youthful figure and few years. His mother still called him "baby" and his father "boy" when speaking of him to others. The man waited, seeming to guess his thoughts, and then continued in the same placating tone of voice, "You are so big and strong and brave I wonder if you wouldn't like to do a job for me? If you succeed I will take you into partnership with me."

Dumbly Tom assented.

The man, whom we will call Pete, handed him something cold and wet from the evening dews.

He felt it and found out that it was a jimmy. He had read about a jimmy in that stirring novel "Caught Red Handed" or "An Adventure in Devil's Gulch". The hoarse voice continued but the honey was gone. In its place was cruel and unrelenting violence, at least that is what Tommy thought, and I think he hit it about right.

"Go," said Pete, "to the farm house on the hill. There you will find a little red house, there is no one in it but a little old woman and she is of no account. Get the swag that is on the kitchen table, and the stocking full of silver. Hit her on the head if she doesn't hush." Here the voice continued, "Grab it and if you blab, good-night, for I don't hesitate over killing a man for a thing like that. So be careful."

Tommy got up. What should he do? Thinking and thinking. This was very different from the happy world of fame and glory that he had pictured. Unconsciously his walking increased to a run and then into a gallop and——he never stopped until he reached home.

Mother was out feeding her chickens before starting breakfast when he stumbled into the yard. At his mother's frantic calls his father appeared in his night-shirt. By their united efforts he was carried into the house and Tommy never said a word when he awoke late that afternoon in his mother's arms and being called over and over again "her poor, poor, baby."

For he had found out that home is the best place after all even though you are called baby——!

The History of Spectacles

In a little graveyard in Florence, Italy, lies the remains of Salvino degli Armati. His gravestone proclaims him the "inventor of spectacles." He died in 1317.

Armati may have been the discoverer of glasses in Europe; but earlier authority points to the fact that spectacles probably had their origin among the Chinese.

Be that as it may, the fact remains nevertheless, that the greatest strides in improvement in lenses belongs to the eighteenth century, and the greatest improvement of all time has been during the past twenty years.

Glasses are now fitted scientifically after a searching examination to find just the sort of lenses is needed to correct the defect of vision.

Immediate attention to failing eyes means comfort in the future.

"THE HIGH SCHOOL WORLD"

Just as the school "Spirit" was ready to spread its wings prepared for its flight to parts unknown, along came the "World" with its quota of sattelites—a "son" and two or three "stars" who illumined the "World", but who—alas! forthwith ceased to shine in their class recitations.

The first issue of the "World" appeared on November 7, 1919, and came out every Friday morning thereafter until the second week in March when it was suspended to make way for the Modulus. During this period many improvements were made in the paper and by the end of its career it had made a remarkable success both financially and otherwise.

Not only did the paper cause the Editor and his worthy staff to spend their sunniest hours and hardest labor in behalf of the "World" but it furnished an ample and sufficient excuse on the part of any member to withdraw from the limelight of brilliant (?) class recitations to the peaceful seclusion of the office-room labeled "The High School World." Here was the center of social life—the favorite haunts of friendless Seniors and Helen Keller. Here was the place Mr. Byers invariably looked when he sought some missing pedagogue.

But whatever may be said, due credit must be given to the untiring efforts of the staff, who so gladly sacrificed their lessons to make the "World" better, and especially does the paper owe much of its success to Mrs. Poinier, who as our Faculty Advisor, aided us with helpful advice and timely suggestions.

High School is blessed (?) with many, but we have heretofore hesitated to classify them. Perhaps, following Mr. Byers' example, we can best do so by parallel.

Let us follow yon damsel as she wends her way thru a stream of struggling humanity to the rest room. After a brief search she drags forth a humiliated and long suffering powder puff and between applications, unblushingly gushes to her left hand neighbor as she gives the new frock the "once over", "How perfectly wonderful!"

Again, we are listening to a recitation. An exacting Pedagogue demands an explanation from a dapper, well groomed senior on our right. Our hero gasps slightly, colors, and sputters "I have it but I left my notebook at home."

The mellow beams of the moon float between the vines on the porch lacing the floor with silver. The porch swing creaks lightly at regular intervals and a low musical voice murmurs, "Honest, Madeline, you're the most wonderful girl I ever saw."

Do you recognize them?

WONDERINGS

I know I'm awful "ignorant" as I have been told before,
I ask a lot of questions and I'm nothing but a bore
But tell me this, please! if you dare,
"Does Ruthie Drover wear false hair?
And say there's just another thing.
Where did Mildred Stemen get her "engagement" ring?
Another thing that I've heard said that Clara Strodel haunted the dead,
And that shorthand she was learnin'
So she takes every funeral sermon.
Tell me this, and answer quick, honey,
Why does John Kenower act so "funny"?
I've seen him lose his dignity and do the "tickle toe"
And yell bloody murder, 'Keller! play "Bo La Bo".'
Why oh why does pretty Jeanette, choose a High School fellow for her "pet"?
Where does Elvin Fleener get the "t" on Modulus
When we know it ends with "s"?
And why are all the Seniors in such an awful mess?
Have you any idea about that question queer?
Do you know anyone in town that walks like Lucille Mehre?
I'd like to know that reason all poetry and its kin
Has left the bright, angelic mind of Edwin Johnny Finn.
Why does Miriam Tuttle always try to act so cute?
And is it honest gospel truth Arnold died in his Union Suit?
There's still another question that troubles this heart of mine
Where does Merritt Creager get his "million dollar" line?
Pray tell me what's the matter with this outlandish rhyme?
In real "poems" is there a thing that critics call "time"?

—Cutie Cat.

The scandal that I know
You wouldn't do the thing you do
The fellows tell me so.

They congregate at Keefe and Cook's
Discuss the latest scandal,
What Mary said, how Mildred looks—
The secrets they do handle!

For they can't keep a secret tight
And never tell a soul
They talk and talk with all their might
And even make 'em whole!

IS THIS A TRAGEDY?

She laid the still white form beside these which had gone before. Neither sob nor sigh forced its way from her heart, throbbing as though it would burst. Suddenly a cry pierced the air—a hear rendering shriek! Then silence prevailed. Presently another cry, more terrible than the first arose. Then all was still save for a low gurgling which seemed to well up from her very soul. Quietly she arose and walked away. She shall lay another egg to-morrow.

THE LOST CHORD

Calvert—"What are they playing on the chimes?"
Creager—"Nobody Knows and Nobody Cares."
After a certain Senior party this spring.
She—"is there an 'e' on the end of chaperon?"
He—"No; but there are two 's' in unnecessary."
Mrs. Poinier—"Why were you late?"
Smithy—"Class began before I got there."
Mable B.—"I want to marry a man with brains"
Mildred G.—"I know dear, but I believe one should marry within ones own circle."

LIAR.
Maiden wearing a new tight skirt—
Steps where high eyes were bold.
Me—I looked the other way—
Darling I am growing old.
She—"Do you know why I won't marry you?"
He—"I can't think."
She—"You guessed it."

NO PEP

He took her rowing on the lake,
She vowed she'd go no more—
I asked her why—her answer came;
"He only hugged the shore."

—Poor Boob.

Senior—"What makes that red spot on your nose?
Freshie—"Glasses.
Senior S.—"Glasses of what?"

A TOUCHY SUBJECT

She (preparing to jump a small brook)
—"If I sprained my ankle how would you feel about it?
He—"Oh, you go on now."

A GOOD RECEIPT FOR SENIOR BOYS

Six mule hairs plus one glass of water. Kick guaranteed.

Two funny things.
Harley Briggs and Mildred Mullen.

Romola Searle to Hilda Smith—"Do you know why all the old maids go to church so early in the morning?"
Hilda—"No, why?"
Romola—"They want to get there before all the hymns (hims) are given out."

If you don't get the point to some of these jokes never mind, it may have been broken off in the press.

Professor Byers to Mary Elizabeth Kelley: "Which do you prefer—Latin or French?"
Mary Elizabeth: "Strychnine, if you please."

Miss Altman: "Edward, have you ever read 'Puddin' Head Wilson'?"
Edward Snyder: "No, I never read any of those books that those fellows write who are always knocking the President."

'(Neighbor) —Ma yI borrow your trombone?
Foust—"What do you want?"

Mary B.—What has the Angel of Peace in her right hand?
Wilbur Cook—A palm.

What Dad doesn't know.

W. W.

He tore at the scented letter,
Blushed and then turned pale,
"The female of the species,
Is more deadly in the mail."

—Goilie.

Judge? "I love the good the true, the beautiful, the innocent."
Guess? This is rather sudden, but I think father will consent."

Sh—Its a dark secret—don't tell anyone. J. P. after one of her number's (evening) dancing.
Guess; "May I kiss your hand."
J. P. You know (lifting veil)—"my gloves are on."

Muncie—"Would you like to take a walk with me?
The other one: "But I don't know you?"
Muncie—"Oh; but what you don't know won't hurt you."

NAUGHTY—NAUGHTY

Daughter—"Yes Mother: Smithy did kiss me last night. But I sure sat on him for it."

Ruth D.—To Mr. Swi.—" Do you think it would pay to cultivate my voice?"
Mr. Swi—" Oh yes, it might come in handy in case of fire.

Ruth La Vine looking at bathing suits, "Isn't that darling?"
Clara S. "Yes, do you bathe?"

Don Ream—giving a speech—
"Lincoln was born in a little log cabin which he helped his father build."

He has a kiss on his lips and a wink in his eye,
With rosy cheeks which are envied by all,
Now we all do wonder why he's short and not tall.
How is this V. K. for our Sophomores.

She—"Now be good."
He—"I'll be good for a kiss"
She—"You can't come to see me unless you are good for nothing."

SQUIRREL FODDER

Miss Cox in History Class to Raymond Moyer: "Will you please describe the Egyptian women?"
Raymond: "They are tall, dark, wear very little clothing, and live on dates."

Professor Byers to William Adams: "One of the most important inventions in my estimation, was that of shingles. When did they come into use?"
William: "When I was between the age of five and six years."

Miss Altman in English Class: "Herman, please give me a sentence using the word 'defeat'!"
Herman Wasmuth: Soap and water are good for defeat."

Merritt Creager: "Harley, have you ever been to 'Bevo'?"
Harley Briggs: "No, where's that?"
Merritt: "Oh, that's a pretty little place near Beer."

Mildred Whiteside to Mr. Stemen: "You claim there are microbes in kisses?"
Stemen: "Yes, there are."
Mildred: "What disease do they bring?"
Stemen: "Palpitation of the heart."

Music---The Mainspring of Hospitality

EVERYONE is eager to enjoy the reputation of being a hospitable host- and rightfully so. Hospitality is the highest expression of cultured good fellowship, and a prime essential to social success.

Nothing, so surely as a SCHAFF BROS. Player Piano, can aid you in extending hospitality. You and your friends can dance, sing and enjoy a wealth of good music. And your guests will go home pronouncing the occasion a big success.

Enjoyable alike to guests and host, it is always the center around which all hands gather for a good time. In art and material, in design and detail, it is all that long experience and earnest endeavor can make a a player piano. Come and hear our pianos, player pianos and victrolas. Suitable terms may be arranged. All the latest in sheet music and Victor records.

M. Finn—What does a college bred man mean?

J. A.—Merely a big loaf, my son,

Will A.—You didn't know who I was last night.

P. McGreevy—No? Who were you?

M. Gardner. Oh: Mildred I heard that you went to sleep in the bath tub with the water running.

Mable B. Well what of it?

M. Didn't you drowned?

M. B.: No, I sleep with my mouth open.

A love that failed.

Record Exchange

Something that should be of interest to the owner of every phonograph or victrola.

It is not a new thing; only new in Huntington. Fort Wayne and other surrounding cities have them.

The record exchange is run on a system of rules which afford protection to every member.

A change in music is very desirable for the owner of every victrola or phonograph; not a complete change but everyone gets more or less tired of the same old records over and over again.

It is not the purpose of the record exchange to hinder or in any way deter the sale of records at the retail stores. It will increase your interest and enjoyment in your victrola and help you to more fully realize its value in your home.

We advocate that you change, say, a dozen records every week or two. Any record or records which you have become tired of and which are in good condition may be exchanged. The changing can be repeated as often as desired, hence if you are in any way dissatisfied with any record exchanged for, you are not compelled to keep it. What you do not like someone else is sure to like, therefore there will always be records to satisfy you.

Record Exchanges have been successful elsewhere, hence one can be successful here. It supplies a need which everyone of you feel should be supplied for the benefit of those who enjoy music. You will like it; ask any one who is a member, what they think of it.

Exchange Open Saturdays

BEGINNING JUNE 12.
